

2011 Festival of Learning

Transforming education, transforming ourselves: inspirational spaces for learning and change

21 June 2011, Nottingham

Education ... in it to make a difference ?

It's a challenging time for schools and a challenging time for education, but it's also an exciting time for learning.

MELA is a learning community inspiring collaboration and reinvigorating practice. Celebrating the bright spots, we see challenge as opportunity and invite you to join us for a day of envisioning effective change and innovation in education.

What is it ?

The 2011 Festival of Learning brings together a wide range of educationalists and organisations under one roof for one day to share the best in practice, creativity, thinking and strategy. If you are in it to make a difference then come and join the change-makers for a mid-summer festival of celebration and networking to include:

creative workshops

informative seminars

keynote inputs

open spaces

resource stands

national/regional providers

Who is it for ?

The festival is hosted by educators in the Midlands region but is open to all. It has been designed for you to create your own learning/CPD journey, but there is plenty for everyone:

Teachers can discover practical classroom activities, new ideas and a range of stimulating resources;

Leaders can reflect on the changes in provision, consider innovation in education, and meet regional and national providers of support;

Providers can network, share perspectives and build new creative and strategic partnerships.

The Festival of Learning is a project of Lifeworlds Learning and is supported by/involves the following (see website for updated list):

Global Learning
for Community Cohesion

Where, when and how much ?

Nottingham Conference Centre, NG1 4BU
(easy access by public transport and good parking)

21 June 2011 (09.15 - 17.30)

£90 per person*

*visit www.mela.lifeworldslearning.co.uk for bookings, further info, and programme.

